

Cornell Graduate Students Oppose CASE/UAW for Many Different Reasons

“GPSA has a proven track-record of working with the administration on both academic and non-academic issues. The CASE/UAW union would limit its capacity to tackle employment-related issues in the future.”

- John T. Sebastian, Medieval Studies

“I may rely on an H1-B Visa to get a job when I graduate. I don’t want the UAW to spend my money fighting the expansion of the program!”

- Mariajose Castellanos, Chemical Engineering

"Ph.D. students at Cornell are about to become more educated than 99.6% of American adults. Any gains that we would receive through a union would be highly likely to be paid for by making Cornell even less affordable for lower classes, and it is hard for me to see the social justice in that."

- David Toomey, Economics

“The UAW has shown at other universities that it is able and willing to take over a graduate student union against the will of the students. That doesn’t sound like a democracy to me.”

- Anne McNeil, Chemistry
